Griffith University is thrilled to be hosting the Footwear Biomechanics Group symposium 2017 (FBS2017) on the picturesque Gold Coast, Australia. The symposium brings together a broad range of researchers, designers, health professionals, footwear business and industry leaders all in the same venue for a unique 3 day footwear-specific event.

FBS2017 is collegial and aims to provide an interactive forum with the focus on how the latest advancements in footwear biomechanics can be applied in real-world settings. The program will blend national and international speakers from both academia and industry. It represents a unique opportunity to promote your brand, product and services not only because of the national and international delegates attending, but because no other footwear conference or footwear industry meeting brings together such a broad range of biomechanists, all working together to optimise footwear design and performance and improve linkages across the international footwear industry.

With an expected audience of 200 delegates, FBS2017 is ideally placed to effectively communicate your corporate message and provide direct access to many key stakeholders in this international industry.

This event promises to be an opportunity not to be missed and one I am confident will provide our valued sponsors and supporters with exceptional commercial rewards.

Yours sincerely,

Prof Peter Milburn
